We reconstruct youth employment

6-14 MAY 2016

Why the training course “We reconstruct youth employment?”

Around 5 million young people (under 25) were unemployed in the EU-28 area in November 2015. This represents an unemployment rate of 20% and it is twice as high as the adult unemployment rate.

As youth workers, our mission is to eavesdrop on the needs of the young people and strive to address them through our activities. But what are the real needs of the young people when it comes to employment? What are their visions and aspirations? Which support measurements will have a real impact on their employability and what topics should we address when implementing activities for young people? In order to give answer to these questions, we joined forces with partners from various countries and conducted a pan-European research with an aim to identify the real needs of young people when it comes to employment. We prepared online questionnaires and received answers from more than 450 young people and youth workers all over EU! The analysis of the results illustrated 3 crucial elements for the employment of young people, for which both young people and youth workers agree

In order to address youth employment young people need to

- Learn how to translate their experiences into competences
- Find the right job for them, despite their studies
- Feel empowered and confident about finding a job

Based on these results, we developed the project “We reconstruct employment”! By taking part in this training course, you will have the chance to explore the real needs and aspirations of young people when it comes to their employment and build your competences in addressing them!

Aim and objectives of the project

The aim of the project is to train the youth workers to support the employability of young people. The objectives of the project are:

- To explore tools that translate young people’s experiences into competences
- To equip the youth workers with instruments that help young people to find the right job for them, despite their studies
- To work with the topic of self-empowerment and confidence when finding a job

Who is organizing the training course?

We are an informal group of young people under the name „allaZOYME” (“we live, we progress”). Grammatically, “allaZOYME” derives from three Greek words, the one embracing the other. In reality it means “we change” but at the same time it encompasses in the change the idea of innovation and the idea of progressing. It illustrates that by experiencing new concepts, we change towards a sustainable, coherent and evolving living. “allaZOYME” is about moving forward, learning and choosing to pursue positive changes in our lives that will facilitate our development, improvement and progress. Every change is enriching. Yet “allaZOYME” does not imply progress of me and you only. It is about the whole society we live in. It is about envisioning a better world and striving to achieve it collectively.

Our group is inspired by the idea of enriching changes in society and is here to help achieve it. Our focus is young people because we believe in their potential and capacities of being the drivers of social change. At the moment the group involves 30 young people with diverse age range. Our team is composed of experienced youth workers but also very young people with dreams and vision for the future.
